purpose.
"The order is an advecate of interna-Purpose.

"The order is an advecate of international peace and of arbitration. The principles upon which the order were founded are 'live and let liva.' And every Scottish Ulte Mason owes it to himself and to his fellow-man to moculate this universal peece idea in the minds of every man and every nation, regardless of race, creed, or belief.

"Every forward step for peace shall have the support and sympathy of every member of the order, regardless of where he may be located. Scottish Rite Masons have been taught to assist in arousing public opinion along this line, not merely te avert the horrors of war, but because the ruthless slaying of armies is not right.

"The supreme council of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Free Masonry takes this opportunity today, through me, to go squarely and fairly on record regarding this proposition. From this time, henceforth and forever, so long as the order is recognized by man never shall this principlee be lost sight of."

Began Promptly.

The exercises began promptly at $:30 o'clock, when the Rev. William Tayloe Snyder, thirty-second degree, Tayloe Snyder, thirty-second degree, pronounced the invocation. John Russell Pope, the New York architect who drew the designs and plans for the Scottish Rite Masons, and who occupied a prominent position with the members of the supreme council, then came forward, and presented to the District Grand Lodge of Masons, the implements used in laying the cornerstone.

These were accepted by Grand Master of Masons J. Claude Keeper, who kept them in his possession until the stone had been set in place.

Sovereign Grand Commander Richardson made the opening address, and he was followed by the Rev. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Eighth Street Temple, and the Rev. Earl Wilfrey, pastor of the Vermont Avenue Christian Church. Following the placing of the cornerstone, the Scottish Rite Choir sang "The Cornerstone," written especially for the occasion by J. M. Neale. The Rev. Richard Pardee Williams, canon of the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul, pronounced the benediction.

The parade of the Masons from the Masonic Temple to the Sixteenth and Streets site was witnessed by thousands. Hours before the head of the line started northward on Thirteenth street to I street, thence westward to Sixteenth seet, a multitude crowded the sidewalks on either side, awaiting the parade.

Line of March.

In the absence of the grand marshal from this district, Past Master E. St. Clair Thompson acted in that capacity, proper places, and kept the two divi-sions separated. Shortly after 1 o'clock the escort of the Supreme Council met at the house of the Temple in Third street northwest, where the councilors were in waiting. Down Third street to Pennsylvania avenue, thence westward to Thirteenth street, the escort and the council marched, when the small pro-cession turned northward, marching to the new Masonic Temple. A detachment of mounted police, the noon, held their annual banquet last night.

The affair was at Rauscher's, and more than 400 of the most prominent Masons in the Western hemisphere, and their wives, were wined and dined. Present were the daughter of Albert Pike, originator of the consistory, and a majority of the members of the supreme council of the Northern Jurisdiction, as well as all the supreme council members of the Southern Jurisdiction of the United States.

The famous Scottish Rite Choir of the St. Louis Consistory again was in evidence, and opened the evening's entertainment. The choir sang throughout the dinner hours.

Richardson Toastmaster.

Provincial Grand Master James Daniel Richardson was toastmaster. When the doors of the banquet hall were opened, the Scottish rite choir, under the direction of James C. Quarrels, sang "Dixie," and the Masons from the far North applauded just as enthusiastically as those from the South.

South.

Provincial Grand Master Richardson welcomed the visitors. He told of the aims and objects of the fraternity, and spoke of the advantages derived from the annual banquets of the Royal Order of Scotland, which unite the two jurisdictions but once every twelve monthly.

order of scotland, which unite the two jurisdictions but once every twelve months.

Provincial Grand Treasurer William Homan, of New York, paid a tribute to Albert Pike, and to his daughter. Provincial Grand Chaplain Richard Pardee Williams also carried out this idea, saying that great impetus has been given Masonry, not only in the District, but throughout the country, by the Order of the Eastern Star.

William G. Henderson, responding to a toast to the Grand Lodge of the District, said: "Our achievements will be crowned when we lay the cornerstone Wednesday of the finest secret order temple in the country. In this city alone we have two of the greatest monuments to perseverance and loyalty in the whole land. They reflect the deep friendship and loyalty and brotherhood of our organization."

Scott Talks. Former Senator Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia, who was elevated the preceding night, told of his Masonic experiences during the civil war. "We went into the territory of you Southern gentlemen," he said, "and engaged in one of the bloodiest battles of the civil war. Vividly do I remember how, just as the sun was sinking, a how, just as the sun was sinking, a Confederate soldier, a brother Mason, lay on the field wounded and with the death rattle in his throat. He looked into my face, and by the sign so dear to all of us, told me he was a Mason. Two comrades, brother Masons, and I, helped our wounded brother through the Union lines, and saw that he was taken to a hospital. It is at those times our order shows true loyalty.

A speech abounding with wit by Roe Fulkerson, brought the dinner to a close.

TRANSFER MOTIONS | PRESIDENT TAFT ARGUED; DARR AND THOMAS IN COURT

Corporation Counsel There Signs of Disruption in Kento File Brief on Behalf of Commissioners.

Two motions in the transfer litigation in the District Supreme Court were argued before Justice Dan Thaw Wright today, one being to dismiss the suit of the Baltimore and Washington Transit Company to compel the Capital Traction Company to issue transfers at Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest and the other to strike out the pleadings of the defndant.

In addition to the counsel for the two railway companies, Attorney Charles W. Darr, representing the Chamber of Commerce, and Corporation Counsel Thomas, apparing for the District Com-

Thomas, apparing for the District Commissioners, were in court, the latter seeking to file a brief to protect the interests of Congress in the matter of universal transfer legislation.

Corporation Counsel Thomas asked permission to file the brief in the event of the defendant railway company raising the question of the right of Congress to regulate rates and charges and to legislate relative to transfers. The court declared it could not anticipate the development of such a dispute, but reserved the right for Mr. Thomas to later file his proposed brief if the trend of the argument necessitate such action.

The corporation counselor stated that he recognized that the District Commissioners could not become a party to the suit, but asserted that they could be represented for the purpose of preserving or protecting Congressional

Brief From Railway Lawyers. Attorneys R. Ross Perry and Thomas Dunlop appeared for the Capital Traction Company and submitted a brief containing 169 printed pages, while Attorneys H. F. Lerch and H. W. Williams represented the receiver of the Baltimore and Washington Transit Com-

The brief filed by the defendant company is a concise review of all the legislation in the District of Columbia with respect to street railways, covering the period beginning with the charter of the old Washington and Georgetown Com-pany in 1864 to date. It contains the company's contentions as to the lack of jurisdiction of the District Supreme Court supplemented with scores of cita-

Lack of jurisdiction to entertain the petition in equity was argued at great length, counsel for the traction company contending that if any remedy was to be had it would be through a manda-mus. Justice Wright halted the argument Justice Wright natted of Attorney Dunlop at this point, and asked that Attorney Williams give his version of the contention that the case did not belong in equity court. Lengthy arguments were made as to this con-tention, which Justice Wright said had strongly impressed him.

Contract With United States.

Much stress was laid by Attorney Dunlop on the proposition that the company's charter, approved June 22, 1888, constitutes a contract with the United States, and that it cannot be voided. He argued that the court could not fix a rate, urging in effect that an order for free transfers would be such, and that it was solely a legislative duty. He called attention to the fact that the Baltimore and Washington Transit

Company and the Capital Traction Company do not physically connect or intersect, and that any transfer from one line to the other would necessarily be given free to the passengers. He stated that Congress never contemplated such an arrangement.

Relative to the claim that the charter of the Capital Traction Company constitutes a contract, and that it cannot be impaired, Attorney Lerch maintains that Congress has a right to amend or reneal an act reserving the amend or repeal an act, reserving the power in the charter in question, and that it was virtually amended when the transit company charter bill was en-acted. He debated that the Capital Traction Company charter was granted in 1888, and that in 1894, and subsequent-ly. Congress indirectly imposed addi-tional restrictions.

Traction Company's View.

On the question of jurisdiction in equity to entertain the petition to compel the issuance of transfers, counsel for the Capital Traction Company contend:

"The facts averred constitute no recognized ground for general equity rerecognized ground for general equity rehef. No matters of account are involved. There is no question of administration of a trust; no accident, traud, or mistake is averred; no injunction is prayed for. * * Running of the brought within any part of the domain.

"The only possible inferences from the language of the petition, including its prayers for relief, are that the petitioners are seeking the interpretation of an act of Congress or are seeking the performance of a statutory duty."

WILL VISIT SOUTH TO PREVENT BREAK

tucky and Tennessee Change His Itinerary.

Changes in the intinerary of Presiat the White House, this morning. Instead of forty-six days aboard train, rushing through the country, stopping here and there for short speeches, Mr. Taft will be in the field for sixty-four days, and will reach Washington No-days, and will reach Washington November 18.

The change in the President's itinerary, so as to include Kentucky and Tennessee, was attributed by progressives here today to the action of the progressive convention in Chicago, where La Foliette was indorsed for the Republican nomination, and where the progressives claim there were strong signs of a severe break in the Taft-Hitchcock organization in the South. When the itinerary was originally formed the South was left out on the theory, it is said, that the Southern States would send solid Taft delegations to the national convention.

Since then, however, the reports from the South have told of a growing fear among Federal officeholders that a Democrat may be elected in 1912, unless the Republicans take some radical step. This is known to have been considered by the Taft managers and the decision to visit Kentucky and Tennessee at this time was looked upon heer as significant.

President Plans Extension of Trip For Visit to South

ON BOARD PRESIDENT TAFT SPECIAL TRAIN, en route, Oct. 18.-"Our Traveling President" today determined to extend his forty-six day "seeing the country" tour-now within two weeks of completion-by some eighteen

The original schedule called for the completion of the trip at Washington, November 1, but the new program cuts the jaunt off at Pittsburgh, October 31, and diverts the President first to Morgantown, W. Va., where he will attend a college affair, and then go to Hot Springs, Va. for a five day rest.

After that he will rush to Cincinnati to vote and then tour Kentucky and Tennessee for several days, Unless the wanderlust forces a new extension of the trip, the President will reach Washington November 18, after 64 days on the road. The original schedule called for the Ington November 1s, after of days on the road.

In Kentucky, the President will make a visit which he has been promising for two years. This is to the Abe Lincoln Homestead Memorial. He intended originally to include this visit in the present trip, but was advised to delay it until after the elections.

Secretary Martin, of the league, said today:

"We believe it is apparent to all that the Tobacco trust has not really dissolved, and that its reorganization plan is a subterfuge. An analysis of that plan shows that twenty-seven men will still have a monoply of the tobacco business of the United States.

The Supreme Court ordered a real dissolution to bring the trust companies within the meaning of the Sherman law. The manner in which the tobacco magnates are going about that dissolution is a virtual defiance of the highest court and of the law.

Many people wear freckles on their face, neck and arms, not because they want to but because they believe they cannot be removed by simple home treatments that are inexpensive. Then, also, there are so many worthless cos-metics advertised to remove freckles, and, these have been tried without any The committee also will strongly suggest to the department that it is encumbent upon the Attorney General to move that the trust officials shall be brought before the ber of the Supreme Court, and charged with contempt of its orders.

A subcommittee of the executive committee of the league, consisting of Herman J. Schulteis, Henry Martin, and that the Todacco truit is a sham; that it perpetuates the monopoly heretofore existing, and that the reorganization by the tobacco truit is a sham; that it perpetuates the monopoly heretofore existing, and that the reorganization and disalution scheme is a patent evasion of the court's order to dissolve.

Criminal prosecution, the league alleges, is now the only means for bringing to book the trust offenders.

Equally as drastic a remedy is the suggestion that the Supreme Court exercise its power to bring before the highest tribunal the alleged offenders upon a charge of contempt. Both of these courtees will be suggested to Solicitor General Lehmann at the conference tomorrow, and the Department of Justice will be asked to suggest to the Supreme Court the propriety of contempt proceedings.

Secretary Martin, of the league, said today:

"We believe it is apparent to all that the Tobacco trust has not really distinct the Tobacco trus
